Acknowledgments

This report represents the efforts of dozens of individuals who contribute to the Hanford Groundwater Monitoring Project: planners, schedulers, samplers, laboratory technicians, data management staff, site scientists, editors, text processors, and staff in graphics and duplicating.

Ron Smith and Stuart Luttrell managed the Hanford Groundwater Monitoring Project and the Groundwater Monitoring Task, respectively. Dot Stewart managed the monumental tasks of sampling and analysis, quality control, and data management.

Debi Morgan and Paula Henry, assisted by Diana Felmy and Wendy Erickson, juggled the scheduling of the hundreds of wells trips for the groundwater project. Scott Conley (Pacific Northwest National Laboratory [PNNL]), Rory Steffler, Scott Worley, and Marty Gardner (Waste Management Technical Services) coordinated field operations. The men and women who actually went outside and measured water levels or collected groundwater samples are the foundation of our work. Thanks to Dennie Brewington, Robert Fox, Jim Hogan, Karl Hulse, Roy Sickle, Kenneth Slocum-Young (Fluor Hanford, Inc.), and David Hollingsworth (Waste Management Technical Services) for doing their jobs so well.

The data management team made sure new and historical data were at our fingertips: Janet Julia, JoAnne Rieger, John Serkowski, Delores Vela (PNNL), Rich Weiss (CH2M Hill Hanford, Inc.), and Roger Schreck (Bechtel Hanford, Inc.). Chris Thompson, Debbie Sklarew, and Janet Julia provided quality control support. Jane Borghese (CH2M Hill Hanford, Inc.) helped coordinate communication between PNNL and the Environmental Restoration Contractor for this report. Bob Riley (PNNL) provided peer review. His comments last year led to major changes this year.

The production of the vast number of figures in this report was the responsibility of the following individuals – their skill is appreciated very much: Mickie Chamness, David Lanigan, John McDonald, Chris Newbill, and JoAnne Rieger. Mickie and Chris put in especially long hours to accommodate many changes. Micki McKinley provided assistance in getting figures and tables ready for the web.

The cover for this year's report was designed by Jane Winslow, WinSome Design, Richland, Washington. The report was duplicated by PNNL's ROB and 337 Building Duplicating crews.

Last, and certainly not least, is our team of editors and text processors: Kathy Neiderhiser, Lila Andor, Barbara Wilson, and Bev Johnston. They showed great patience and ingenuity as we all learned new ways of publishing this report.
